

I am writing to express my concern that the FCC may enact regulations that would effectively lessen the current telephone privacy act that we enjoy in the state of Indiana. I have seen a drastic reduction to near zero of the interruptions created by telemarketers. Most significantly I no longer receive weekend calls, calls before 9 am or after 9 pm, nor hang-ups on my answering machine. The Indiana act has been quite sufficient to end the harrassment that comes from these calls. Please reconsider the federal action if the language in it would lessen the state act provided by Indiana.
